

This Is What A Bibliographic Record And Its Fields Will Look Like

■ *Fields:

1. title of article

2. author

3. title of periodical

*4. Subject Headings

(specific terms assigned to a source that allow you to find articles that are about your specific search term)

5. Abstract

(a summary of the article)

(Note: author's reliability)

Title: The Bloody Bad Games.

Author(s): Wansbridge, Peter<sup>1,2</sup>

Source: Maclean's; 12/15/2003, Vol. 116 Issue 50, p20, 2/3p, 1c

Document Type: Article

Subject(s): COMPUTER games
COMPUTER war games
VIOLENCE
TEENAGERS & violence
CHILDREN & violence
TELEVISION & children
VIOLENCE on television
VIDEO games & teenagers
VIDEO games & children

Abstract: This article presents the author's concerns about violence in video games. Before Mike Bullard, before Leno, Letterman or the "Daily Show," there was "Tabloid." It was must-watch viewing because "Tabloid" got the guests you wanted to see, ranging from the big politicians to major writers to the stars of stage and screen. My favourite television show was "The Lone Ranger," Clayton Moore was the star. There was little talk then of the potential violent effect of those programs on children's behaviour, even though most playgrounds had kids living out their fantasies by pretending to shoot each other. You can't say that about today's games, which are often played not in groups, but by children alone, almost hypnotized by the images on their computers or televisions. Those images don't shy from detail: when people die, they do so in bloody, brutal ways.

Author Affiliation: <sup>1</sup>Chief Correspondent of CBC Television News
<sup>2</sup>Anchor of The National

Full Text Word Count: 657

ISSN: 0024-9262

Accession Number: 11642732

Persistent link to this record: <http://0-search.epnet.com.library.dcccd.edu:80/direct.asp?an=11642732&db=aph>

Database: Academic Search Premier

View Links:  Check the DCCCD Libraries Catalog

* * *